

News Briefs: Wastewater line fixed in Brighton

Jul. 25, 2013

Brighton officials said crews have completed repairs on a wastewater line on South Third Street, and the street was reopened to traffic Monday.

City Manager Dana Foster said Fonson Construction worked Sunday and early Monday to finish the project. The line ruptured last week. A small section of the road still needs to be patched.

“The combination of Fonson’s crews and city of Brighton utility workers were a great team in getting this repair completed,” Foster said.
